B. C. SIRCAR GAVE LECTURE ON NEW INDIA

New Progressive Policy Of India Similar to Canada's.

OUTCOME OF WAR.

Greatest Contribution Of West Is That Of the Christian Religion.

A very pleasant meeting was held last night in Strathcona Hall, when Mr. Sircar, of India, gave a short address on "New India." Before the meeting started, Massey, Shaw, Anderson and Dunn entertained the audience with a few selections, and Mr. Johnson, of the Wesleyan, rendered a solo entitled "Friend of Mine," accompanied by Willard.

Dean Adams was then called upon to introduce Mr. B. C. Sircar, who, he said, was a Bengali of High Caste previous to becoming Christian, and a prominent man in Indian Y.M.C.A. work. This lecture is the first of a series to be given in Montreal by Mr. Sircar. He said that in India, a land of great religions, that a great development awaits Christianity. He spoke of the excellent work that Murray Brooks and Gordon Brown were doing in Colombo.

Mr. Sircar then took the platform and said that he was diffident about speaking to so distinguished an audience. It was a great privilege to speak to McGill men on a subject as important as "New India." Mr. Sircar speaks excellent English, and it is a pleasure to listen to him, with his naturally rich voice and English accent.

Through the great struggle that has just ended, the great country of India was affected in common with the other nations of the world. India feels that it is the opening of a new era in her history.

Mr. Sircar spoke of the fast steamship lines, and cable systems, and telephones, as but a means to the great end of cementing the brotherhood of the races. All the races are so intermingled that one cannot think of one nation exclusively.

The Magna Charta of Indian liberty was the proclamation of 1858, when India came under British rule. Mr. Sircar gave a brief outline of the policy of the British Government, and showed how fair Britain was in giving all creeds and races their own freedom under the British flag.

Many changes have come to India since then, the greatest of which is due to the war. The Indian army is only obliged to serve within India's frontiers, but through their loyalty they rendered valuable assistance to Great Britain on no less than six fronts.

The Indian army was self-supporting for the first time in history. In previous times, Great Britain has always (Continued on Page Three.)

ANNUAL MEETING OF J.A.H.A. HELD

Prospects Are Bright For a Record Season.

Last night in the M.A.A.A. Club House on Peel street, the thirty third annual meeting of the Junior Amateur Hockey Association was held. Representatives were present from the M.A.A.A., the Victorias, Loyola College, and McGill, the deputation from the last named being composed of Messrs. Trainer and Kelly.

Applications for membership were received from St. Lambert and Kensington, but owing to lack of representation on their part, nothing definite could be decided. However, a new club, the "Panthers," were admitted to the Association. Huntington, another applicant, was permitted to retain its position as honorary member, as owing to the age limit being placed at twenty, and owing to their inability to journey weekly to Montreal for the purpose of playing their league matches, it was found impossible for them to make satisfactory arrangements. However, they have the privilege of challenging the winners of the schedule to a game to determine who should meet our Ontario opponents.

The next business was the election of officers. Mr. C. G. Morrison was elected president by acclamation, Mr. E. Caughlin and Mr. B. Magee being chosen as first and second vice-presidents respectively. Mr. H. O'Hagan was given the position of Secretary-Treasurer, while Messrs. H. Schofield

E. T. MEMBERS HOLD PROGRAM

Many Events Of Unusual Interest Presented At Union.

The Eastern Townships Club last evening staged one of the most successful smokers so far held. It was presented in the Union, and the programme was interesting and varied from the first strains of music given by the renowned Harmony Dance Orchestra till the last echo of the McGill yell resounded against the walls.

During the evening boxing bouts were put on between Smeaton and Shackell of St. 23, Wolfe and Long of the Faculty of Law, followed by an impromptu affair between L. Kellnor and N. Davis. All these proved highly spectacular and demonstrated to the spectator the great progress being made by the classes of the B. W. and F.

and E. Smith composed the remainder of the executive committee.

It was decided that the junior age limit should be placed at twenty years and that a junior participating in more than two intermediate games or one senior match would be disqualified. It was further determined that the amateur cards should continue to be issued annually. These application forms should be sent in as soon as possible to Mr. Morrison at the "Gazette" office. The new schedule will be drawn up so as to be completed by February the twentieth.

After a vote of thanks had been moved for the retiring executive, and appreciation expressed for the conduct of the Melville team in Toronto last year, the meeting adjourned.

HOCKEY TEAM ON CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY TRIP

Will Make Extensive Tour on Exhibition Games.

PROBABLE TEAM.

Keen Competition Expected In the Inter-collegiate Series.

Profiting by the cold weather of the last few days, the McGill Hockey squad has been putting in a lot of very hard, but useful work, in preparation for the coming season. The only way, however, for the men to get into real hockey form is to actually play regular games. In order to do this, an extensive trip has been planned during the Christmas holidays, which will eventually take them as far as Pittsburgh. They will start by leaving for Toronto, where they will remain one day only, playing against the Argonauts of that city. The team that "Shag" will take along with him is as yet somewhat problematical, but it will probably consist of a goal keeper, two defence men, and six forwards. The men whose work so far has proved to be particularly good and who will probably be included in the team to make the trip are: Cully and Heney on the defence, and Russell, "Boo" Anderson, "Ted" Behan, Earle Anderson, Dineen and Eric Parsons as forwards.

The McGill squad will meet some very strong teams, and while the results of the games are very doubtful, the great purpose is to give the men some real practice. After playing the Argonauts, they will go to Hamilton where they remain one day, playing one game there. In meeting the Argos, the Red and White will come up against a good forward line in Bishop, McCamus and Hicks. Bishop is rated as a pretty slick handler and speed merchant, and was a member of the Hamilton Intermediates that won the O.H.A. honors a few years ago.

From there the squad will go to Pittsburgh where they will play two games, on the 27th and 28th of December, meeting the A.A. team that won the national championship last year. This will probably wind up the journey, as the men will return direct to Montreal from there.

An invitation has been received from Harvard to play them on their own ice sometime in February. It will probably be accepted, although at this early date nothing can be definitely said.

After returning from their trip, the men should be in fine form for the opening of the season, which will take place early in January. The City League will play two days a week, on Mondays and Thursdays at the new Mount Royal Arena, but each team (Continued on Page Two.)

UNION CAFETERIA CLOSED OVER XMAS

Special Needs Of Clubs Will Be Catered To.

Mr. Price, of the Union Cafeteria, on being interviewed by a representative of the "Daily," expressed his great appreciation and satisfaction at the excellent support given to the Cafeteria by the students. The Union, and particularly the dining hall, is being recognized more and more as the meeting place for the men. When they have enjoyed a smoke after their meal, they adjourned to the upper floors of the building where amusement with forms of billiards, conversation, music and reading is to be obtained.

Owing to the small number of men who would patronize the Cafeteria during the holidays, as is evidenced by the fact that only eight informed Mr. Price of their willingness to do this, it has been deemed expedient to discontinue the service over Christmas. Accordingly the Cafeteria will be closed from the night of Saturday the twentieth of December, till the fifth of January, 1920, when lectures recommence. However, if any clubs or societies wish to use the dining hall during this period, their needs will be catered to if they notify Mr. Price in advance.

On the whole, the Union Cafeteria seems to have a very rosy future in store for it, and judging by past appearances, this part of the Union will soon be regarded as a "rendez-vous" for all students.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1919.

THE MOCK PARLIAMENT

Perhaps no single institution at McGill has attained such instant popularity or awakened so much general interest as the Mock Parliament, which was re-established on Wednesday evening. There is a perennial appeal in an activity of this kind, and particularly so in these momentous days when so many and such insistent questions are awaiting settlement. The advantages of such an institution are obvious. All that can be said in favor of other forms of debate are equally true of this. Moreover, its interest is general and not, as frequently happens, confined to a few, while the rest form a more or less interested audience. Under the rules formulated on Wednesday, everyone will have an opportunity for a full expression of his opinion, and the inevitable result will be to stimulate the general interest.

Wisely, as we think, it was decided that the parties to be formed would not conform strictly to those existing in the Federal Parliament. Two have emerged so far, the Constitutionalists and the Progressives, names which may mean much or little, but which, broadly speaking, denote, respectively, conservative or radical tendencies. A third party, we hear, is to be organized in the near future, bearing the name of "Independent," but it would be interesting to know of what exactly they are to be independent, as the parties so far have only been formed on the broadest of lines. However, there is no doubt that this "freelance" spirit will appeal to many of our keenest debaters, who care little which side they support, as long as they may display their talents "agin' the Government." In any case, this three-fold division should ensure a thorough discussion of all the outstanding features of present-day politics.

In this issue, one of the parties sets out its "platform." This is not by any means to be construed as indicating any partiality on the part of the "Daily," but on the contrary each platform as it is formulated will receive similar prominence in these columns.

There is little doubt that the Mock Parliament has come to stay, and its influence should prove wholly beneficial. Quite apart from the opportunities it affords for a frank discussion of important questions, it provides a splendid medium for the practice of public speaking.

If it properly fulfils its function it should prove a veritable forum for the expression of every shade of University opinion, and if so employed, cannot fail to be conducive to a wider understanding of these questions which this generation will, admittedly, have to face and answer satisfactorily within the next few years.

THE BUILDING OF NAVIES.

With reference to Lord Jellicoe's visit to Canada and his advice to the Dominion about the necessity of forming an adequate navy, it is interesting, in fact vitally important, to consider the future of naval warfare. There are various current opinions on the subject, each of which has a supporter among prominent naval men of the day.

Lord Jellicoe is the advocate of the big ship. He believes that the heavily armed big gun ship will continue to be the backbone of the navies of the future, and that small surface craft, submarines and aeroplanes will be auxiliary to them, as they were in the recent war.

Earl Beatty, on the other hand, inclines towards small mosquito craft, destroyers, motor boats and the like. With high speed and powerful torpedoes these are certainly very potent, and it has been proved that they can be used against badly handled big ships, such as the Austrian or Bolshevik, with almost always deadly effect.

But it must be remembered that there is a large body of opinion which advocates radical changes in navy building. They say that wars of the future will be fought in the air or under the sea. Lord Fisher believes in the submarine as the predominant feature of future naval warfare. He wants submersible battle cruisers, of high speed and heavy gun power. Whether this ideal is attainable remains to be seen. Admiral Sir Percy Scott, on the other hand, believes that wars of the future will be fought out in the air.

With such a mixed body of authoritative opinion, it will be seen that it behoves the would-be builder of navies to move warily.

PLANS TO MAKE PARIS WORLD TRADE CENTRE.

The inauguration of a series of permanent expositions of French products will soon take place in Paris. It will receive the support of the municipal council and it is intended to make Paris a world commercial centre.

The project will begin with a permanent "Palais de l'Agriculture" at Porte Maillot. This will consist of a series of buildings, in which will be housed for the exhibits of the leading producers of French foodstuffs. Buyers from all parts of the world visiting Paris will be urged to inspect the samples and place their orders through a central marketing organization.

Parliamentary News

The following statements have been given to the "Daily" as being authentic expressions of two of the leading parties inaugurated at the "Mock Parliament" on Wednesday evening. The "Daily" will publish from time to time developments which may take place in the political situation from the viewpoint of each individual party.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL PARTY.

At the meeting of the "Lit." Wednesday night, the majority of the Radicals were evidently acting as mere moths, attracted by the luminaries in their midst.

Aside from the scramble to the Red side, remained a sturdy few—men of independent views and solidity of thought, men who saw and shrank from the danger of over-progressive-ness, of government by experiment. These men form the Constitutional Party.

"The Constitutional Party stands for the first ideal of government, the maintenance of peace, order and good government. We consider that external peace can best be maintained in Canada and in the Empire by Imperialism, and Empire Parliament, and strong military and naval forces. The League of Nations should be given every possible support, but too much reliance should not be placed on it until it has proved its worth.

Regarding the peace and good order of the country itself, it must be remembered that the individual was antecedent to the State. He found he could not happily exist in solitary state and soon gathered about himself a family, then a tribe, then even tribes were forced to merge into larger units of government—the States. In each of these enlargements of the sphere of government, it became necessary to subordinate more of individual rights to the welfare of the state, until now the State stands for the fullest individual freedom, provided this do no harm to another. The compact is for the State to protect one individual from another and the whole from external aggression. This, at least, is the long standing view of Constitutionalists the world over.

Adopting this as our doctrine, we, therefore, declare as unwarranted and grossly illegal, legislation regarding prohibition as recently enacted. The closing of the bars certainly had the advantage of reducing crime, but how it can interest the State to forbid a man to partake in his own house, surrounded by his own friends and family, is beyond the bounds of imagination. It is an immoral abuse of authority. Even more so the agitators for "no smoking," Radicals or Progressives, as they may style themselves, should not be allowed to continue their pernicious interference.

Besides maintaining that the State should not in its legislation go beyond the necessary limits of peace, order and good government, it is held that these three qualities of progress must be maintained at all costs. There should be no government by a class for itself, with the evident result of disintegration. Strikes when, as so often occurs, obviously ill-founded, should be trodden down with the full force of authority, and all attempts at the launching of Bolshevism nipped in the bud. Trade Unionism should be recognized and encouraged, but Trade Unions should be forced to give publicity of the management of their affairs in a manner similar to all corporations. The first of President Wilson's famous Fourteen Points can well be applied to the Labor World. "Open treaties openly agreed on." In this manner sound policies would be fostered by Capital and Labor, and the radicalism of both parties eliminated by the time-immemorial custom of openly talking out the matter.

Additionally, it seems essential that the Constitutional Party state its views on a few questions of the day that do not fall under the categories already enumerated.

Regarding government ownership of industries, we condemn this policy insofar as it extends beyond those public services essential to the welfare of the smaller units of the State, such as Telephone, Tramways, Light. In all possible fields, we consider that private industries should reign alone and competition encouraged.

On the point of the tariff, we wish this to remain as it is, among other reasons, to avoid further dislocation of industry than that already caused by the recent war.

It is considered that Education should be more generally provided by the State in its own interests, and also in the interests of its individual citizens. The enormous loss of "genius" among those who cannot afford to take the education necessary to discover and train that invaluable attribute, is one of the most serious channels of waste in the State.

To briefly sum up other points that may be mooted, we stand out and out for complete assistance to returned soldiers, administered not on the basis of days and years in the army, but rather on the basis of deeds done and present need. But on this point there can be no divergence of opinion in the platforms of the parties.

We desire conservative measures to be taken to the fullest possible extent in regard to Canada's forests, lands, mine and water power, and strong earnest efforts to bring to time the profiteering parasites in the country that are causing misery to the countless families of the less well-to-do."

We trust that in the above platform

THE PROGRESSIVES.

The McGill students are evidently in favor of progress, judging by the hearty support accorded the Progressive whips in their canvass of the various classes, yesterday. An endeavor to secure an estimate of the supporters of the Progressive Party met with dismal failure, as it was utterly impossible to compute the numbers who made application to be enrolled under its banner. However, it is announced by the whips that they will attempt to give an estimate of their numbers at their caucus in the Union this afternoon.

The party has not yet chosen their permanent officers, as it is thought that this should be done at a general caucus of all party supporters. This general meeting will be held shortly after the re-opening of college after the Christmas holidays, and arrangements will be made to secure a large auditorium to accommodate the numbers.

The officers of the party were asked yesterday what their platform would be, and they stated that it was not possible to give anything for publication at the present time. Furthermore, they were of the opinion that any platform made up on the spur of the moment could not be considered as being important. The officers of the Progressive Party will give their platform their weighty consideration, and will announce the results of their deliberations at the general meeting early in January. It is possible that the party programme will be announced in an issue of the "Daily" shortly before the general meeting.

Organization of the party will be completed at a caucus of the whips in the Union at five o'clock this afternoon. At this meeting the whips from all the faculties will gather and will make plans for the rest of the season. Anyone who has not enrolled in the Progressive Party should do so before the party caucus to-night, so that a good estimate of its strength may be gleaned.

HOCKEY TEAM ON XMAS HOLIDAY TRIP

will only be scheduled for one game weekly.

The Inter-collegiate Series will be started in the latter part of January, and will undoubtedly be more keenly contested than the rugby proved to be, thus ensuring more active competition. In this connection, the appointment of Nick Bawlf to the position of hockey coach at Queen's University, has resulted in a great revival of interest in all lines of sport, especially hockey. With a turn-out of over eighty men, Queen's seems determined to put a team on the ice that will hold its own with the best of them. U. of T. also appears to have a very promising squad, although in their first game against the Dentials in the O.H.A. they were defeated 7-4. In spite of this, they put up a very good brand of hockey, exhibiting a forward line that was well trained, especially in back checking. The men have not played together long enough to perfect their team play as yet. Nevertheless, they should develop a team that will make the Red and White exert themselves to the utmost.

The McGill squad has been practicing regularly on the Campus Rink under Coach Shaughnessy's direction. The men are rounding into fine form, but as yet are still weak in shooting. Their team play and passing, however, has improved considerably, and with a little experience gained by playing together, will undoubtedly develop into a first class team.

OFFICER ELECTED.

One of the "Daily's" Reporters, H. O'Hagan, of Arts '23, was appointed secretary-treasurer of the Junior Hockey League at a meeting held at the M.A.A.A. yesterday evening.

IT TASTES JUST THE SAME.

"You say you were in the saloon at the time of the assault referred to in the complaint?" asked the lawyer.

"I was, sir."

"Did you take cognizance of the bar-keeper at the time?"

"I don't know what he called it, but I took what the rest did."

we have given meat for thought. If your sentiments agree with our general policy therein expressed, be ready with your help in the coming session, and in the meantime gather around yourself a band of supporters. Do not forget that we want no support based solely on faculty or fraternity, club or clique. We desire the assistance of those sane men of thought who, in every country and in every age, have formed and do form the backbone of the State—men who always look with askance on Radicalism, and who are against "Red" symptoms to the limit.

Early in the coming session a caucus of the Constitutional Party will be held and regular officers elected. In the meantime, those endeavoring to launch your programme beg your hearty support.

MEDICAL UNDERGRADS. MET.

At five o'clock yesterday a special meeting of the Medical Undergraduate Society was held in the Assembly Hall of the New Medical Building. The hall was nearly packed with a representation from the first and second years.

The business involved was principally a discussion over an editorial recently published which severely criticized the actions of the first and second years at their annual Fresh-Soph. banquet. The society decided to demand an apology from the "Daily." The other items of business was in connection with the annual Medical banquet. Norm. Williamson, chairman, announced that the affair would be held in the Place Viger Hotel, and that it would take place at the end of January.

WESTERN CLUB.

Plans for the annual banquet of the Western Club will also be discussed, so any other club members who are able to attend the meeting this afternoon are requested to do so.

GOING STRONG.

An old Scotchman fell ill, and was ordered by his doctor to follow a treatment which included prescribed quantities of pills and whisky.

Later the doctor enquired how he was getting on with the treatment, and he replied: "Well, doctor, I may be a wee bit behind with the pills, but I'm about sax weeks ahead with the whisky!"

POLICE UNIONS BACKED BY THE RADICAL'S FIRST STEP TO SOVIET RULE

By DR. A. P. McMAHON.

At the request of President Wilson both parties to the dispute between the police force of Washington, D.C., and Commissioner Brownlow postponed further action until after the meetings of the labor and capital conference now in session. Washington has thus been spared for the time being the rioting and violence that marked the strike of the Boston force. The police in Washington have formed a union in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, as did the police in Boston, but have agreed not to call a strike at this time to win their demands.

There is a good reason for believing that the movement to unionize the police is being forced upon the American Federation of Labor against the wishes of its established leaders by the radical element. This is thoroughly in line with the aims of the radicals, for unionization of the police would paralyze the arms of government and place all power, political as well as economic, in the hands of labor organized in groups according to occupations, which is the essence of Soviet rule.

The Massachusetts authorities refused to arbitrate the issue whether or not policemen should be allowed to form unions to protect their interests; and they denied the police this privilege in spite of the threat of a strike and later in the presence of danger to their lives during the strike. When the strike was called off after a period of violence checked only by the State Guards, the strikers were not reinstated.

Governor Spurned Arbitration.

"We cannot think of arbitrating the government or the form of law," said Governor Coolidge, when it was proposed to him that the Boston trouble should be settled by discussion. He issued a statement that the law which the people have made through their representatives must be upheld. The reign of law, the maintenance of peace and security, the very foundation of civilized society and of all organized government, are the basis upon which the police are allowed to form unions and to strike.

If the labor and capital conference should adopt any course of action other than emphatic endorsement of Governor Coolidge's stand, the basis for realizing a Soviet America and carrying out the fantastic dreams of the radicals will thus be tolerated.

The radicals, inspired by foreign examples where unionization of the police and the army has been the last step in bringing about a general strike and the establishment of Soviet rule, are said to be at the bottom of the present movement whereby a number of police unions have been formed and secured charters from the American Federation of Labor. In any case, police unions are a distinct step toward overturning constitutional representative democracy as established in the United States in favor of the Russian system. Revolution along economic lines primarily, but eventually in the political sense, is involved in allowing the police to unionize in affiliation with organizations outside the police department. That the labor and capital conference should take the place of the regular processes of constitutional government in deciding the issue means that the radicals already threaten the established form of government. In allowing the issue to come before it, at the instance of President Wilson and the leaders of organized labor, the conference will be "arbitrating the government or the form of the law."

The American Federation of Labor has defended itself when public indignation was aroused by the bloodshed and looting in more than thirty cities, the secretary of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Gompers, visited Boston during the strike and declared that "the American Federation of Labor is 100 per cent. behind the Boston police strike." The incongruity in the secretary's past and present positions is obvious. According to it the Boston police went on strike to gain the right to maintain a union, which would agree not to strike. This position is a complete admission of German money for revolutionary propaganda in Russia, but did not care whether it benefited the Germans, provided the social revolution was brought about. The radicals here are willing to work through the Federation of Labor in unionizing the police, because they know that if the police controls the police unions will have power to bring about a social revolution in America. But even in Russia the dictatorship of Lenin and Trotsky found it necessary to recruit the Red Guard, a sort of police, responsible only to the commands of the dictatorship. The police and soldiers who by violence in the revolution, were all sworn to, and even the secret police, must depend on a non-union police force to maintain Soviet rule.

The national life of a great country such as the United States does not depend upon the economic interests of various classes of workers, as the radicals would have us believe. The millions who make up the nation have other relations to one another. The relations which a comparatively few have as members of labor unions. They are church members, club members, graduates of schools or colleges in which they all owe allegiance, and they marry and contract friendships regardless of how it affects the interests of labor unions.

The national life must be maintained independent of the coercion of any class within it. Speaking of the strike of the railway men, Premier Lloyd George recently termed their tactics as "another effort to hold up the community and strangle it into submission." Police strikes also have occurred in various cities in every case the movement has been checked immediately, notwithstanding the violent opposition to the government's action by organized labor. The nation means to be master in her own house. The Premier has declared, "a just master, a fair master in her own house."

Senator Myers, speaking recently in Congress with regard to the difficulties with the police force in Washington, predicted that if police unions were tolerated there every city in the country would soon have such a union. The next thing would be unions of soldiers and sailors, and then constitutional government will collapse. We will have Soviet government within two years," said the Senator. "Unless some branch of the government steps in and stops this tendency. There will be no need of holding an election in 1920 to select a President or a Democratic President. Soviet government will have been organized by that time."—New York Herald.

defrayed the expenses of any army which went from India. India sent 1,500,000 men, 500,000,000 tons of foodstuffs, besides rails for Eastern theatres of war, and telephone and telegraph supplies. This rally was a manifestation of a wave of loyalty which swept over all India. It was a death blow to Germany's hope of an Indian revolt.

Britain was not slow to recognize the great loyalty of India, and announced a progressive policy of government, increasing the Indian Representatives, until at length India shall be self-governing. A reform scheme, very similar to that of Canada and Australia, passed the Indian Parliament a week or ten days ago. It is a new political era for India and the first time she has ever had a Democratic form of government.

Mr. Sircar told of how the aristocrats had ruled India for over 4,000 years, and had never believed in any other form of government. A Democratic government cannot succeed unless there are a great number who think more of others than they do of themselves. Providence has assigned the ruling of India to England, and all things point to a great future for her.

The problem of educating the young people of India is not that of making them capable of earning a living, but of fitting them for the part that they must play in her future. India is grateful to the West for all their contributions of Science, the telephone and others, but more than these the contribution along spiritual lines has meant much in the life of India.

One of the most gifted Hindoo statesmen admitted that he was not politics, not diplomacy, not a strong army, but the moral force of Jesus Christ that has conquered India.

He is the leader who is a representative man to every land and race, and whose teachings are eternal. One cannot conceive of a race to which the Sermon on the Mount and the Parable of the Prodigal Son would not apply.

At a religious convocation in Chicago, the only prayer that was considered a fitting expression of the religious ideals of all religions was the Lord's Prayer. It was chosen above all others to close this meeting of many religions. The purpose of the doctrine of Christianity is to fulfill, not destroy, the old religions of India. Christ is the fulfillment of the highest inspirations and teachings of India from the earliest times.

"The Y.M.C.A.," says Mr. Sircar, "is a mighty instrument, embracing in its theology all doctrines in Jesus Christ and not submitting to any fixed dogma or creed." The Y.M.C.A. had done a great deal of good to his country, especially in the training of the young men, for in the young men is the latent force that will become dynamic in the interest of India in the future.

Mr. Sircar himself has done college work in Calcutta for many years, and is of the opinion that education aims for the good of the country.

In closing, Mr. Sircar said that he brings heartiest greetings from his country and from the Indian Y.M.C.A., and asked that the prayers of the Canadian people should go out to India in this crisis of her development.

CADETS TO TRAIN AT CAMP DIX.

Camp Dix, with its wide area and equipment used in training three divisions for service in France, may be made the summer training centre for West Point cadets. An inspection just completed by officials of the Military Academy has put this camp to the forefront of posts under consideration by the U.S. War Department. It is reported. A definite decision will be made within a few days, when inspection of two other camps is complete.

If Camp Dix is selected, the fortifications and big areas around the camp will enable the classes to work out the manoeuvres planned by the war College at the actual front in France last year. A famous "Marne Hill," with its trenches and the other terrain of the surrounding country, will lend itself admirably to the proposed field work.

Lieut.-Colonel Hanford, commandant of cadets at the Academy, and Captain Thompson, his adjutant, were in charge of the inspection at Camp Dix.

CHEAP COBBLING MATERIAL.

"I really can't see how such a large family could be brought up on so small a wage as you say your father got," said the American listener. "Think of the cost of footwear alone." "Oh, that didn't stump father," returned the Yorkshire man. "You see when our shoes get thin 'e went fishin' an' brought 'ome a few soles and 'eels."—Boston Transcript.

YALE'S HOCKEY SCHEDULE.

A revised schedule for the Yale University hockey team's Christmas trip into Canada has been announced. The Yale seven will play the Hamilton Tiger Club at Hamilton on December 30, Queen's College at Kingston on December 31, Brockville on January 1, St. Michael's College at Toronto on January 2 and Welland Hockey Club at Welland on January 3. The Blue team will go from Canada to Philadelphia, where a match will be played with University of Pennsylvania on January 5.

CHICAGO TO HAVE STADIUM.

Approval of a design to give Chicago the largest stadium in the world was made known with the announcement that a $5,000 prize had been awarded the winner among the contesting architects. The stadium is to be on the lake front between Roosevelt Road and Sixteenth Street, to be completed within two years and cost over $1,500,000. The plans provide for a seating capacity of 100,000 persons.

A SUITABLE ONE.

The new preacher was asked if he would like any special hymn to be sung to agree with his sermon. "No," he replied. "The fact is, I hardly ever know what I am going to say until I arrive at the pulpit." "Well, in that case," said the Vicar, "we had better have the hymn 'For Those at Sea.'"—Dallas News.

AIN'T ANGIE AWFUL?

The co-eds of the University of Cincinnati have a Man-Haters Club. Two girls were recently requested to resign on the ground that they had not lived up to the ideals of the organization. After the business of the club had been transacted, an interesting paper on "Why We Hate Men Until We Have a Date" was read by one of the members.

FOREIGN PRESS EXTRACTS

Owing to the addition of our Press to all sorts of propaganda and spoon-feeding, actual and authentic extracts from foreign newspapers are to a great extent inaccessible to us. Such being the case, it may be of interest to undergraduates to read some translations and extracts from the most recent German newspapers to reach this country regarding the economic situation, particularly in Central Europe.

The "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" (semi-official), Oct. 2, quotes from a book by Dr. Priem: "A Germany from whom important economic regions are torn away, a Germany whose population has suffered during the war as no other people — this Germany is to pay to the Entente 30 milliards gold marks. The economic work of the new Germany will largely be for the Entente." "There will be little scope for increasing the goods supply so necessary for home consumption." He goes on to say that Germany cannot at the same time both discharge her debts and attend to home production, and therefore severely criticizes the conditions imposed upon his country by the Peace Treaty.

"The Germania" (Berlin, Centre), Oct. 2, represents the German Minister of Trade as saying that he hoped for and sincerely expected an early resumption of trade relations between Germany and the rest of the world. He declares that there is a great market for German goods; that her imports are a mere fraction of her pre-war basis as regards quantity; but when regarded from the financial viewpoint, it is found that they have practically doubled in value. He therefore admonishes his patriots to prudence in their dealings with foreigners.

The "Frankfurter Zeitung" (Rad.), Oct. 31, commenting on the German economic situation, declares that the extent of the indemnities which Germany will be able to pay depends entirely on the reconciliation of German industries, and goes on to state that, in the event of the Allies demanding more from her than she is in a position to pay, the result will be an even more terrible economic crisis which will affect every European nation.

On Nov. 2, many Germans do not realize the need for a League of Nations, and do not appreciate the fact that all the consequences of a five-year world war and the absolute powerlessness of the defeated powers can only be remedied if international relations are placed on a new moral and political basis. "Does anyone think," it asks, "that we Germans are in a position by our own strength to restate our people on a worthy footing among the nations of the world? If we want to live together we must co-operate in thought and action."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung (Semi-Off.), Oct. 10, reproduces a message sent to the Chancellor of the Commonwealth by the Senate of Bremen, in which they affirm that the surrender of 400,000 tons of floating docks, dredges, tugs, etc., as punishment and reparation for the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow signifies the final rule of Germany's maritime position. It declares that if these are surrendered the result would be the destruction of all Germany's hopes of economic restoration, and urges the Ministry to reject the "incredible demands of the Entente."

The Voessische Zeitung (Berlin, Dem.), Nov. 10, — Bernhard writes on the same subject: "It is no blind hatred which vents itself in this note, but rather malicious and cruel satisfaction at finding a pretext to continue the work of destroying Germany." He also claims that the note is primarily the result of England's jealousy, and asks, "But who except England has any interest in the expropriation of Germany's shipping concerns? Their eyes must be bandaged who will not recognize that the mortal enmity of England for Germany. It is all right. . . . England will help. Certainly she will . . . to Germany's bankruptcy."

D. A. Z., Nov. 10, commenting also on the Allied ultimatum regarding reparation, declares that the Entente policy is inspired by the idea of punishment in a manner which used to be reserved for countries in Darkest Africa, where a sort of "taming the wild beasts" was combined with utilitarian politics, and finds a peculiar coincidence in the fact that the Allies choose as the form of punishment a demand for dock material, which will render Germany's maritime life impossible.

Frankfurter Zeitung (Rad.), Nov. 8th, describes the Scapa Flow Note as "blackmail," and characterizes it as "a new link in the international systematic strangulation of German commercial navigation." Although on the eve of peace it is apparently to be a peace without reconciliation, and the paper comments bitterly on the treatment to be accorded to the officers and men who formed the crews of the vessels sunk at Scapa Flow, who are to be detained in captivity until the accomplishment of the demands of the note. "Since the abolition of slavery," it remarks, "it was the custom of all nations, with the exception of cannibals, to release the captive enemies as soon as possible after the cessation of hostilities. Our enemies are going to infringe this law of elementary humanity. The judgment of posterity will fall upon them." It further declares that Germany's situation is so grave that if she is to survive, "the spirit of the governments must be transformed which are bent upon our destruction. If Germany collapses, chaos for Europe will be the result. Germany is starving and freezing in this early winter. Let it at last be left in peace. The German people are willing loyally to fulfill the peace treaty. Let this not be made impossible by the intolerable augmentations of their burdens. We are not begging. We demand our rights, the rights of humanity."

On Nov. 5, writes that the suspension of all passenger traffic from November 5th to November 15th has opened the eyes of the population as to the seriousness of the situation with regard to transport and the supply of foodstuffs and coal. It also affirms that this shortage has the result of preventing the delivery of coal to France stipulated by the Peace Treaty. "In this as in other matters," it continues, "we will do what we can, but there is a limit to our capacity defined by what Germany requires for the maintenance of her economic and political peace."

On Nov. 8th, — The difficulties of the coal situation were discussed in the Prussian Assembly. Speakers in that Assembly declared that the coal shortage had assumed the most serious proportions and attributed it, in part at least, to the carrying out of the terms of the Peace Treaty. According to one speaker, the two main reasons for the shortage were the reduction of working hours and the delivery of coal to the Entente.

Neu Erie Presse (Vienna, Dem.), Nov. 4, declares that the transport of food stuffs takes up all the means of transport, and that there is a million and a half tons of coal in one district alone waiting for the necessary trucks.

D. A. Z., Nov. 4th, — S. Hartman remarks that the difficulties of transportation are not confined to the railways, but also extend to river steamers. Consequently, districts formerly dependent on this means of transport are also feeling the pinch, not only with regard to the coal supply but also in some cases with foodstuffs. The suspension of the passenger traffic is intended to give an opportunity for the proper distribution of such commodities as corn and potatoes and to give a little breathing space to the repair works. The Government announces that this interruption may under no circumstances interfere with the home transport of the prisoners of war.

The Vienna correspondent of the Presse de Paris describes the capital of Austria as a city dying in agony — in poverty, cold and hunger. The carrion crows of all the world have closed on the corpse of Austria: gentry of uncertain nationality, speculators of every sort, dance and make merry on the ruins of a nation. The general population pays 8s. for flour where it paid 24d. in 1914, milk is not to be found, babies die of cold in their beds in the Vienna Foundling Hospital. The situation is one in which the revolutionary elements are reinforced from all quarters, without distinction of origin or creed, from those who are at bay with hunger.

The Neue Freie Presse (Vienna, Dem.), Nov. 4, writes: "The conquerors from the West send us mission commissions . . . they collect data and make reports as if they had known nothing about it, as if they had not long ago reported on the misery. The tales of atrocities all over the world, reported with gusto by the Entente, pale before the fate of the babies of Vienna. . . . How great is the responsibility of the victors. . . . If they go on accumulating masses of paper and do not give immediate assistance when helpless infants are perishing for want of coal, and millions awaiting in the morning dread the horrors of the day."

The Information (Paris, Dem.), Nov. 8, states that at a meeting of the French Cabinet the French Ambassador at Vienna earnestly recommended to the government a subsidy for the suffering population. The entire Cabinet approved, but the motion was rejected by Clemenceau.
